FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 26.

The Speakership. [BY JOHN W. FORNEY.] The Speaker of the first House of Representatives of the United States was Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg, a Pennsylvanian, boro at the Trappe, Montgomery county, June 22, 1750, and ordained to the ministry of the Luthersn Church in Germany, where he was educated. He officiated as a Lutheran clorgyman in this State for several years; but afterward became a politician and sat in the First, So-ond, Third and Fourth Congresses, serving as Speaker in the First and Third Houses. His nephew, Henry Augustus Muhlenberg, was also first a Lutheran elergyman and then a politi-ciat; and his brother, John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg, was ordained deacon in the Church of England, April 22, 1772, but, like the others, subsequently became a politician, having left the church at the outbreak of the Revolution, taking for his text the celebrated motto: "There is a time for all things, a time to preach and a time to fight," and "now was the time to fight." He was a brave solution and the line to fight that the line to the dier, and sat with his brother in the First and Third Houses of Representatives of the United Third Houses of Representatives of the Onlied States, was United States Senator from 1801 to 1802, and Collector of the Port of Philadelphia when he died, in 1809. The South has held the Speakership in twenty seven Houses out of forty-five since the organization of the Government. Nathaniel Macon, of North Carolina, was Speaker six years; Henry Clay, of Kentucky, eleven years; Andrew Stevenson, of Virginia, seven years; John Bell, of Tennessee, two years; James K. Polk, of the same State, four years; Howell Cobb, of Georgia, two years; Linn Boyd, of Kentucky, four years; and Jas. L. Orr, of South Carolina, two years. Henry Clay, who enjoyed the longest continuous ser vice, was undoubtedly the most conspicuous of all the Speakers. Brave, elequent, social, am bitious and unselfish, he commanded his partisans alike by his courtesy and his courage. Many a joke is told of the way in which he ruled the stormy body over which he presided. I knew intimately Howell Cobb, Linn Boyd and James L. Orr, the Speakers of the Thirty-first, Thirty-second, Thirty-third and Thirty lifth States, was United States Senator from 1801 Thirty-second, Thirty-third and Thirty lifth Congresses, as I knew all their Northern successors, and can, therefore, understand the difficulties of Mr. Randall, the last Pennsylva nian just elected to the same high position. The most delicate task of the Speaker is the appointment of his standing committees. Sometimes the struggle for the chairmanships is very exciting; charges of bad faith, and even personal collisions are not infrequent. These standing committees are the conclaves in which the measures of Congress are prepared, and every year adds to their importance. The choice places are the Ways and Means, Foreign Af fairs, Appropriations, Commerce and Claims. By courtesy, the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means is the leader of the House, but this practice has latterly fallen into disuse. In Mr. Clay's time the Speaker was frequently on the floor, and it was his electrical elequence. that roused the country to resist Great Britain in our second and last war with that power. His speeches fired the nation from border to border. More than once he interrupted a mem ber whom he supposed was reflecting upon him-self personally. Ready to fight at the drop of the hat, he permitted none to take liberties with him. Fixing his eagle eyes upon the angry debater, he would cry out, in his loud, clarion voice, after the fall of his hammer had rung like a shot through the hall, "Does the honorable member refer to the Speak or of the House?" which sounded so like a challenge that the as tonished representative generally sought safety in apology or silence. Mr. Clay was first elect ed Speaker of the House when he was thirtyfour. Mr. Randall, when last chosen-his

ATTORNEYS AND COURSELLORS AT first election for a full term—was in his fittieth year. The body of which he is the Henry Clay was the master. I do not think there is a duelist on the floor. Manners are not what they were in ISH, when Henry Clay mounted the Speaker's platform. Two years previous he had fought a duel with Hum phrey Marshall, and sixteen years after he had a hostile meeting with John Randolph. Now better breeding has come with our growing country. Clay's course was almost a continuous conflict with somebody. His differences with General Jackson, though occasionally reconciled, lasted down to the hour of the death of the old chieftain. It will be recollected that, in 1840, Jackson attacked Clay in terms of un exampled bitterness, to which Clay replied with equal acrimony. The ex President was at the Hermitage, and in reply to a speech in Nash-ville of Mr. Clay, in which the latter had charged him with appointing known defaulters to office. Jackson used these strong words:-

does this demagogue appear when he descends from his high place in the Senate and roams over the country retailing slanders against the living and the dead;" to which Clay instanly replied that "The insinuations and gross epithets in General Jackson's note are alike impotent, malevolent, and derogatory of the dignity of a man who has filled the highest office in the universe," and that "Respect for the public and for myself allows me only to say that, like otherwise.

Under such circumstances how contemptible er similar missiles, they have fallen harmless at my feet, exciting no other sense than that of scorn and contempt." Clay at that time was in his sixty-fourth year, and Jackson in his seventy fourth. Mr. Randall, I believe, will encounter no such enemies as those aroused by the impetuous and autocratic temper of the great Kentuckian. The country is at peace, and glad to be at peace. Political reconcilia-tion is the fashion of the day. A quiet, gentle man is in the Presidential chair, and the dem ocratic party itself ought to be in the most com placent mood. The difficulty of the new Speaker will consist in appointing his standing committees, with a horde of hungry politicians looking for patronage and promotion. Already there are threats from exacting expectants. In one respect Mr. Randall will be equal to the all his trials and aspirations.
